WOMEN’S VOICES:
The Leadership Summit and An Evening of Breaking Barriers

THE SCOOP.
Not just in Missoula, but nation wide, Women’s Voices for the Earth fills a unique niche: we are the only organization that works at the intersection of environmental health and the women’s movement, and the only organization in the state of Montana working explicitly to eliminate toxic chemicals that harm human health.

On Saturday, October 19th, 2013, women leaders from around the region will converge in Missoula for one action-packed day, featuring:

- Women’s Health & Environment Leadership Training during the day; and,
- Women’s Voices: Breaking Barriers at night, featuring riveting and inspiring talks from women leaders.

As a progressive and respected business in the community, we’re inviting you to join us in the inaugural year of this exciting day based on learning, engagement and inspiration.

About THE WOMEN’S HEALTH & ENVIRONMENTAL LEADERSHIP SUMMIT.
Women are hungry for knowledge of how to live healthier, happier lives. We see this every day, as evidenced by the deep level of involvement among our members regionally, and their desire to learn how to make safe & healthy choices to protect themselves and their families from toxic chemicals. Not only this, they are eager for the opportunity to raise their voices to make systemic change that will effectively regulate harmful chemicals.

To nurture this budding activism, Women’s Voices for the Earth will host the first-ever Women’s Health and Environment Summit in Missoula, MT this October.

The Summit will bring together 50 women from throughout western Montana with the twin goals of bringing new, passionate activists into the women’s environmental health movement and training existing activists as effective leaders in their communities. This day-long immersion of learning, training, and networking will emphasize how women can make effective change on the personal, community, and national levels.

Panelists and keynote speakers will be a mix of WVE staff, women from the local community, and speakers who will be featured at the evening event.

Sample focus sessions and panels include:
- The Link Between Women’s Health & Environment
- Bringing New Women into the Fold: How to Spread the Good Word
- Women’s Health & Fracking in Montana
- Citizen Advocacy 101
- Movers & Shakers Panel: Inspirational Leaders
About WOMEN’S VOICES: BREAKING BARRIERS.
Women visionaries, entrepreneurs, philanthropists and creatives from this community and beyond will take the stage at the University of Montana Music Recital Hall for one night of story telling, performance and inspired speaking. Peppered with live music and dance performances, these 5-20 minute multi-media talks (think a la TEDx format) will provide insight in to the struggles, processes and victories undertaken by an incredible group of women who have come from around the region to share their visions of Breaking Barriers.

This unique evening will host the day’s Summit participants, as well as the general community, for one celebratory evening of honoring women’s voices. Prior to the show will be a VIP reception for Summit participants, VIP ticket holders, Speakers and Sponsors to meet & greet with light fare & beverages.

Also integral to the evening’s program will be the second annual Awards in Women’s Health & Environment, honoring women leaders in Montana who have made great strides to improve the quality and health of this community. This will be a ticketed event to the public, with general admission, VIP, student and senior rates.
